TO CORRESPONDENTS.

We want fresh, reliable and readable letters from every neighborhood where the SEMI-WEEKLY SOUTH KENTUCKIAN circulates. Give us the news plainly, correctly, briefly and interestingly, without needless comment or rhetorical flourishes. Let no ordinary notice exceed ten lines don't discuss the weather, or write about matters of no interest to the reading public.
Use but one side of the paper and write as often as you have news items to chronicle, and not otherwise.

OUR NEWSPAPERS.

Our English critics, while admitting the enterprise of our journals, and that they present the news of the day in a thorough and attractive shape, are disposed to find fault with the editorial comments that are made upon men and measures. They say that the entertaining way in which news and gossip are discussed have drawn people away from solid intellectual reading. It is unfortunately true that the system of free general instruction in this country has not produced a race of book-readers.
Among the well-to-do middle class, which includes the young and enterprising merchants in our large cities, not one in ten reads a book—with the exception, possibly, of a novel—from one year's end to another. They depend solely upon newspapers for instruction of all kinds. And yet this is the class upon whose energy, honesty and enlightenment the future welfare of our country rests. The antidote for this evil should be found in the newspapers themselves. If they have such a hold upon the minds of the people, so that they no longer care for other mediums of knowledge, they will be in time, if they are not now, in a condition to supply their readers with the solid mental food needed to maintain intellectual health.
Those who have paid much attention to this subject must be aware that some advance in this direction has been made.
Already, able and thoughtful articles appear in all our leading journals from week to week. More than this, evidence is taken to present to the reader the latest results of scientific research.
No doubt there is a great deal of the superficial in these presentations, but this is a trouble that time can cure. If the newspaper is supplanting the book, it is trying to make good its loss.

CLUNNY NEWSPAPERS.

The palm for large-sheet newspapers should be borne off by the publishers of the Steubenville Herald, which is by far the largest single-sheet newspaper that comes to our editorial table. It is a handsomely-printed folio sheet, three feet by four feet eight inches in size, each of its four pages containing twelve columns. Its immensity puzzles us in one breath, the first commendation being as to how long the arms of the man who makes up the forms, and the second as to how its subscribers manage to read it. Goliath of Gath might possibly have performed the first operation safely, but the second is as yet without any satisfactory solution to our quivering mind. Our plan would be to roll it up on the side of a large barn, and read it from the rafter of a stepladder, or from a pair of movable stairs.
A bicycle might possibly answer the purpose.

A boom for large-sheet newspapers, or a great number of sheets at one issue, may perhaps rage during the days of our present generation, but let us hope that the time is not far distant when we shall have more of our newspapers in a condensed form, more of the extract and essence of the diluted essence of daily and weekly journalism, and that these will be more palatable and set better on the vibrant stomachs than the soups and gruels of the present fashion. The Sun, the Boston Herald, and the Springfield Republican, as now conducted, each give a foretaste of what may be expected when this good time, which, it must be admitted, is rather slow in coming, shall have come to us. The extended line of day is an excellent one for super manufacturers and waste-paper purchasers; but whether any one else is pleased or benefited by the foot-by-foot sheets is an open question.—Holyoke Paper World.

SHARK'S FIN.

Shark's fin, dried, are sold in every Chinese shop in New York. They are imported from China. There are three kinds, of which the best are the fins of the white shark. These are worth $3.50 per pound. The poorest kind, which are known as black shark fins, are sold for half as much and even less. Shark's fin is a popular dainty among Chinese and is salted and dried for export, and looks like a section of whalebone when chopped, but boiled in water a gelatinous substance is extracted which is esteemed very savory.

A species of stew made of shark's fin, fried oysters, rice and peppers is a champion Chinese dish. Dried oysters are ordinary bivalves, extracted from the shell, dipped in salt and strung on strings to dry in the sun. They come from China and look for all the world like fish. John Chinaman infinitely prefers them to the freshest of fresh ysters he can buy here. Muscles, conks and clams are preserved by him in the same way.

CARE OF CARPETS.

To make sweeping an easy task, get carpets of a kind that are easily swept, then save them from unnecessary litter by care about scattering fine chips or crumbs, of wood, cloth, paper or food.
Eating should be done in rooms easily cleaned, with carpets of oil-cloth, or similar material, or with bare floors, or with a linen crumb cloth spread upon the carpet underneath the table. Children should not be allowed to run about the house with pieces of food in their hands. If their food is not all taken at the table, the child should be obliged to sit still somewhere, catching his crumbs upon a napkin, bib or apron, instead of dropping them upon the floor. Children who learn "to save mamma trouble," and so get at least a smile of gratitude from her for their thoughtfulness, are far happier than those who are not trained to care, but are allowed to make themselves a general nuisance among orderly people. If they wish to whistle or to put paper or dolly things in your best rooms, you need not necessarily refuse them. Spread a large cloth or newspaper down to catch the chips or clippings, and see that it is safely emptied as soon as the child's work is done.
Grown-up people are sometimes very amusing, because of their lack of this kind of training. They pull flowers to pieces in your presence, whistle on your smoothly-shaven lawn, scatter fruit peelings and cigar stumps about the yard, scribble on the covers of your magazines and margins of newspapers, and scratch matches on the walls of the house, or leave disagreeable marks of some kind in every possible place.

THE LAWN AND GROUNDS.

Most front yards have some attempt at ornamentation, but taste is too often outraged by the indulgence of whims.
The rich green of the grass plot is broken up and frittered away by numerous single plants or small beds scattered all over the yard. In some instances evergreens are planted in the immediate front of houses, and so near to them that, although they had obtained only a partial growth, the branches are already intruding themselves into the veranda, thereby not only inconveniencing the residents, but presenting anything else rather than a handsome appearance, and threatening, in the course of a few years, to almost entirely exclude the sunlight from that portion of the premises. This is a grave error. Trees, however leaning, should never be planted so near the house as to bar out the sunshine. There is no more effectual method of destroying their beauty, nor a better plan for introducing disease. I have known houses, thus crowded upon by trees of dense foliage, that became so unhealthy as to be regarded almost untenable.
Large trees are out of place in small yards; they should be in keeping with the plot they are intended to beautify.— Exchange.

The following advertisements are taken from a San Francisco newspaper: "The gentleman who sat down on a cream pie in a Market street car is known to the lady who had just purchased it, and, even though he may have no regard for the hungry orphans for whom it was destined, he is urged at once to remit $1.50 and the expense of this advertisement to the business office of this paper, to save the exposure which will follow his disgusting conduct." Right underneath it this Janus of a journal evidently accepts the money of the other side, as the unjoined will testify: "If the slightly intoxicated lady who allowed a gentleman to spoil a $10 pair of beaver pants by placing a lot of slush wrapped up in paper on the seat he was about to occupy does not immediately remit that amount to the care of A. B., at this office, a full account of the affair will shortly be given to the press."

Hurons of the Glendale (Mo.) train robbery: One man had with him $200, and taking it out of his wallet he divided it into two portions of $15 and $183.
His intention was to put the $155 in his satchel, but in the hurry and excitement of the occasion he put the $15 pile in the satchel, and when the robbers entered the car and he handed over the other was he checked to himself that he had made a big hit in concealing his money in his satchel. It was not till he reached home that he discovered his terrible blunder. A gentleman in the sleeper hid his wallet, containing $175, under the cushion of the seat. When the robbers entered the train they ordered all the passengers to stand down toward one end of the sleeper, while they searched the car. The first cushion they raised was the one under which the $175 had been planted. The leader of the train-robbers appeared to be very angry at such an exhibition of want of confidence, and made inquiries of the passenger as to who had concealed the money in such a place, but, being unable to ascertain, he said that it was a d—d good thing for the man that he did not find out, for he would have killed him "too quick." Another passenger hid his money and watch in a spittoon, and attempted to get clear by turning over $2.50. The leader told him that first-class passengers in the sleepers always carried more money than a hat, and that he could take his choice, so hand over his money or lose his sweet life, while the muzzles of two revolvers were held in close proximity to his head. He decided to take his chance on the former, and gave up his money and watch, which were fished out of the spittoon and turned over with unmistakable apologies.

A WATSON editor found some strange-looking looking bits of metal in the street, and took them to a jewelry store to ascertain what they were. The stuff turned out to be money.—Peel's Sun.

THE UNBROKEN REPORTER.

The reporter is supposed to enjoy many privileges; he passes doorkeepers and ticket-sellers unquestioned; he gains admittance everywhere, and generally, being a cheerful, hail-fellow-well-met sort of man, the enlightened public consider him highly favored in all respects.
But, ah! his lot is not a happy one.
He endures hardship and severe trials.
In order to get the facts with which to construct his numerous articles, he must travel on an average of five miles a day, or an aggregate of 1,500 miles a year.
During these perambulations he asks several thousand civil questions and gets several thousand uncivil answers; gets ordered out of offices and houses; has dozens of doors slammed in his face; is asked ten thousand questions and returns as many short but civil answers; gets into the circus once on a promise to give it a big send-off; is buttonholed thirteen hundred times by parties who desire to impart a good item about themselves; is welcomed wherever his pencil will put money into people's pockets or give them a little notoriety. However, he pays 5 cents a glass for beer, full rates for board, top prices for clothes, either walks or pays full fare on the street-cars. While others are enjoying the opera, the social party, the circus, prayer-meetings, lectures, a game of cards, a turn on the roller-skates or marching with a political club, the reporter is wrestling with a mass of chaotic facts and endeavoring to get them into shape for you to read while you quietly dispatch your warm breakfast.
He gets to bed at 3 o'clock in the morning, and, between the annoyances of flies, noisy chambermaids and pencils of sunlight boring into his eyes, he does well to get seven hours' sleep by the time he is aroused at noon to get his breakfast. At 2 o'clock he reports at the office and begins the same old round of duties. Is this your idea of a free, untroubled life?

THE NEWSPAPER OF THE FUTURE.

Editor Smith, of the Chicago Weekly Express, is of the opinion that "the newspaper of the future ought to be, and doubtless will be, a sheet of moderate size, printed in plain type of good size, on clean white paper. Its pages will be small, and it will be folded, cut and stitched like a magazine. If it be a general newspaper it will be devoted to matters of general interest, leaving the details of markets, court reports, etc., to journals devoted to such specialties. It will contain no advertisements; papers devoted to advertising as a speciality will be circulated at a nominal cost.
It will omit all of the petty and immoral news which fills so much of the space of the daily press of the present day—crimes, scandals, personalities and provincial items. Criminal and scandalous matters will be monopolized by the scavenger press, the journals of immorality. It will be fair and open and independent; it will give a hearing to different opinions and to all enlightened thought. It will seek a reputation for its ideas as well as for its news. It will employ the ablest writers and thinkers of its time, and it will give pay adequate to attract such labor. Its greatness will be measured by its ability, moderation, truthfulness, decency and fairness, and not by its sensations or its size. And there are many things it will not do. It will not blackmail any one; it will not wear the livery of the rich and the powerful; it will not be a machine to gratify the personal likes and dislikes of its owner; it will put on no airs of infallibility; it will be careful to label no one, and to make no mistakes; but if it should fall into error it will be eager to make amends; it will not boast or brag of its own achievements, nor will it engage in a petty war of depreciation upon its rivals."
